

I strongly support the "do not call" list. I work in an office all day, speaking on the phone, answering my emails, responding to phone messages and do not ever want to come home (as I did before) with my phone continually ringing with a person at the other end trying to sell me something. If there is anything that I need I know who to call and where to go.